Award-Winning Storytellers Ralph and Margaret Chatham

“Never tell a story unless you love it.” That’s veteran storyteller Margaret Chatham’s motto. And she adheres to it, recognizing that stories can be loved in all kinds of ways. “You can love a story for its language, or for a twist in the plot, or for its surprise ending,” she says. A compact figure, she exudes confidence and competence. She, along with her husband Ralph, have been cornerstones of the storytelling community within the Folklore Society, and regionally, and were honored for their long-term and outstanding efforts with the National Storyteller Network’s Oracle award in 2003.

Ralph Chatham’s “business” card reads “Ralph E. Chatham Storyteller, Physicist, Private Insultant and All-Purpose Curmudgeon.” Those who know him cannot deny he’s a storyteller par excellence and can boast a distinguished career as a physicist,
FSGW HOUSE CONCERT

Meteora
Beautiful Voices in Harmony

Tuesday, October 2 • 8 pm
Downtown Silver Spring, MD

After attending the FSGW Getaway as special guests, Kat Logan, Jim Loney, and Will Brown — together known as Meteora — will stay around for another couple of days in order to present a house concert at the home of Lorraine Van Buren and George Rathbone in Silver Spring.

This wonderful trio from Maine presents beautiful harmonies in many genres. The group’s name is a Greek word meaning “suspended in the air,” and that’s a great description of their music. All of them have fine voices, and they blend perfectly. Kat, Jim, and Will have been singing together informally for several years, and became an official performing trio earlier this year. Their repertoire is varied — everything from blues to original compositions to songs in other languages, and probably a few surprises as well. Some of the songs are accompanied by fine guitar work, and others are done a cappella. Kat and Jim are both songwriters; Will says, “I just play and sing.” They are mainly a vocal trio, but do some instrumental pieces as well as accompanying themselves on guitars, banjo, keyboard, laud, accordion, and even a little percussion. Their intricate arrangements in so many genres will appeal to virtually everyone!

If you see Meteora at the Getaway, you’ll surely want more. And if you miss that weekend, this concert is your chance for a fine evening of music.

Suggested donation: $15 (more if you wish — all the money goes to the performers). Please call Lorraine or George at 301.495.2820 for directions. Near the Silver Spring Metro Station on the Red Line.
Keith Murphy

Traditional songs of Canada and Vermont
Saturday, October 6 • 8 pm

A native of Newfoundland, Keith Murphy’s traditional song repertoire is based in Eastern Canada and Quebec as well as his current home, Vermont. His direct and intimate style—with singing in English and French—infuses old ballads and songs with a powerful intensity, while his rhythmic and percussive guitar playing brings new shape and color to his songs. His 2005 album, Bound for Canaan, showcased his refined sense of balance between innovation and tradition.

Keith was a founding member of Nightingale, a trio that broke new ground in its sophisticated approach to traditional music. He is a mainstay of the Boston fiddle extravaganza Childsplay, and has also worked extensively with Tony Barrand on the song repertoire from the early twentieth century of the Atwood family from Dover, Vermont. He also appears frequently with his wife, fiddler Becky Tracy. At the home of Jamie and Betsy Platt in Potomac, MD. Info and reservations: glen.echo@erols.com or 301.717.4641. Suggested donation $15.

She has long been recognized by club- and festival goers for her superb interpretations of Scottish, Irish, and English songs and ballads. A former winner of the “Sidmouth Singer of the Year” award, Moira became more widely known through her contributions to the Pastimes albums. She also has a solo album, On Ae Bonny Day. Moira has appeared in Britain, Germany and the USA—charming audiences with her clear ringing voice and wonderful repertoire both solo and as part of the well-known a cappella group Craig, Morgan, Robson. She has recently put together a compilation CD, Times Past, of music recorded between 1970 to 2003.

For reservations and directions, call Kathie Mack at 301.270.5367 or e-mail her at kpmack2@gmail.com (note that the old twizzles e-mail no longer works). Members absent: Betsy Platt, Penelope Weinberger
Other attendees: Leslie (staff bookkeeper), Dave Casserly (dance report)

- Sandy Aubin, the newly elected secretary, is having difficulty taking adequate meeting notes and the board voted to appoint another board member each month to take notes in his stead. He'll format those notes for the official minutes. He has created an online site for the minutes, is documenting the work of the Secretary and has begun writing a handbook for Board members. He'll establish an online to-do calendar for the Board.

- Dave Casserly, representing Dance Chair Penelope Weinberger, reported that Contrastock has sold 170 tickets, the cap is 400 in advance so that 100 tickets will remain to be sold at the door. The online Meetup is in place for the contra shuttle, but no drivers have signed up yet.

- The annual budget meeting will occur in October.

- Membership statistics—1080 family, 742 individual—stable over the year. Founding members are not in the database

- Roxanne is working on a policy for new groups interested in being sponsored by FSGW
- Web Committee report by Sandy Aubin—the steering committee is stalled; Liz, Sandy and Roxanne will investigate the idea of a new publicity website or blog. There was discussion about whether it's better to have a separate website for outreach/PR in order for the changes to be made more quickly.

- Liz is investigating a membership in Cultural Capital to advertise our events—no decision yet; She is assessing all the FSGW facebook pages to make sure they are in accordance with the guidelines for the new logo.

- FSGW will co-sponsor the Eisteddfod Festival in the Catskills November 2–4 with The Folk Music Society of New York. (See info on page 22.)

- Peter Maier questioned the wisdom of having elections every year.

- Discussion arose about whether we should sponsor more sings, and venues were discussed.

- Life Member recognition ideas were discussed.

- 50th Anniversary (begins October 2013)—we will form a committee with people from different eras and segments of FSGW. Roxanne and Liz are interested.

but would also tell you he’s one of the kindest souls you might ever meet—tall and fair, and slight of build, Ralph is soft-spoken with a friendly and gentle demeanor and can frequently be identified in a crowd by his leather Aussie hat with the braided band, one of several he chooses from when telling stories.

Margaret and Ralph have quite a story of their own . . . they’ve been married for 42 years (having met in college at the University of Kansas) and have a son and daughter. Ralph says, “Margaret became a storyteller early when she found that it was the most interesting part of learning to become a librarian. Within a year, while I was spending more than half my nights on a submarine, she was trying to get youngsters to come to an Oahu library that had been foolishly located on the wrong side of a four-lane road. So Margaret went to the schools on the other side and told the children wonderful stories, helping them understand that even more stories were in the library.”

She kept on telling stories as they moved to Long Island and then Connecticut. Finally, while on another submarine, Ralph realized how much fun Margaret was having and so he started telling stories in 1979, on the sub, half way through a long, boring patrol, 300 feet underwater, to a submarine crew who had not seen even arctic sunlight for six weeks.

However, in another sense he had been telling stories from the beginning of his time in the submarine force. Crew members are assigned to a sub for no more than three years, and while the Navy likes to think that all submarines act the same, it is well known that every boat’s systems work fine, are fail-safe, are universal throughout the fleet and vary vastly from ship to ship. What Ralph, as operations and navigations officer, found out, is that the best way to teach the sailor, and officer too, is to tell him a story that makes his submarine’s specifics stick in his head.

Yes, our brains are wired to learn through stories . . . and while Ralph was keeping the submarine culture alive by telling tales on board, Margaret began presenting stories to a group that would soon morph into the Voices in the Glen and the Folklore Society’s Storyswap that continues unto this day. Once again, Ralph decided his wife was having far too much fun and began telling to the group, too. Now he tells to more critical audiences from here to Hawaii, spinning folktales defrosted for the microwave age, long tales, Jack tales, sea stories, and literary tales for children, adults and those who have not yet decided which they are.

Margaret’s favorite story is a literary tale called the Power of Speech by Natalie Babbitt, which she memorized and has been telling for over thirty years. The goat is given the power of speech by the devil, who is trying to get the goat away from the old woman who owns him. The goat yells “bad words” till the old woman releases him, but it turns out that the goat didn’t care for his life in hell, either. He yells bell-ringing words that the devil hates to force the devil’s hand, and is turned into a stuffed goat, to which the old woman says, “That’s what comes of talking too much.” It is written in language that fits my mouth, and everyone loves the “bad words” part. It neatly ties up all the loose ends. It’s fun. Most of the other stories she and Ralph tell are folktales with just a sprinkling of personal stories mixed in occasionally.

Besides telling, Margaret has helped to produce events that allow others to tell. She was instrumental in organizing this Folklore Society’s storytswap back in 1983, and a year later, working alongside Jean Alexander, was one of the founding members of Voices in the Glen. She contributed to the formation of the MidAtlantic Story Tellers’ gathering, and played a supportive role in forming VASA. (Virginia Storytelling Alliance). She has organized many programs and festivals throughout the years, and has been the editor of the Voices in the Glen newsletter for over twenty years.

Area teller and University of Maryland storytelling professor Jane Dorfman says “Margaret always makes herself available to help out. The Chathams open their house to gatherings and make all comers feel welcome. They let their home phone be used for all contact info. (If you call you’ll encounter Igor the Answering Machine). They are never too busy to answer questions and I cannot remember them saying no to a request for help. They are incredibly knowledgeable about stories and are great tellers. Incredible memories, too! They know soooo many stories and still you can feel their excitement when they hear a new story or teller.”

Finally, Margaret emphasizes that storytelling is not just for kids but is essential to keeping the traditions of a culture alive. Stories work metaphorically to transmit values and history, to convey feelings, and to teach the lessons of survival from generation to generation.

The Folklore Society wishes wholeheartedly to thank Ralph and Margaret Chatham for their role in keeping the almost-lost art of storytelling alive and vital in the Washington D.C. area, for their warmth and hospitality and for their endless giving within the community. Thank you.

You can next hear Ralph tell one of his favorite old and scary stories, Saki’s “Sredni Vashtar” at the pre-Halloween storytelling concert.
